Don't let anything hold you back from studying abroad--there is no obstacle that is big enough to stop you! I am a double major, fully supported by financial aid and I was able to live and study art and foreign language in Paris and Florence for a year. No matter your situation, grab hold of this opportunity to travel and expand your mind through brand new perspectives, ideas, and foods. Studying abroad will assuredly contribute to some of your favorite moments ever.

Major: Human Biology
Grad Year: 2012
Abroad Location: EAP-University of Sussex (Brighton, England)

Studying abroad was definitely one of the major highlights of my college experience. I was able to make new friends from all around the world and broaden my cultural experience by travelling to over 5 different countries in only two months. It was amazing seeing iconic structures, such as the Eiffel Tower and parliament, and especially fun trying to learn all the accents!

Name: Buddy Tymczyszyn
Major: Int'l Studies- Anthropology
Grad Year: 2011
Abroad Location: OAP-Nepal

I have tons of pictures and memories from Nepal, but of all of them, this one is the most important to me. I got to work in orphanages, visit monasteries, do a month of independent research in the Everest region, and hike the most beautiful peaks I've ever seen--but the part that drilled deepest in my heart was the people I met and came to love. This is a picture of me with my host family in Kathmandu--miss 'em like mad.

Name: Angela Yang
Major: Art History
Grad Year: 2012
Abroad Location: EAP-Rome, Italy

Studying abroad was hands down the most rewarding and enlightening aspect of my college career thus far. Not only did I make wonderful friends halfway across the world, but I also got the chance to experience firsthand what I would otherwise have only learned in a lecture hall. It's difficult to summarize such an indescribable experience, so I encourage everyone to see it for themselves!

Name: Mandy Licata
Major: Communication
Grad Year: 2011
Abroad Location: EAP-UC London

Choosing to go abroad was the best decision I made as an undergraduate student. Not only did I see amazing historical sites and learn so much about London, but I made friends that I hope to know forever and I grew substantially. I absolutely loved my time in London, and I was able to travel around Europe quite a bit as well. Living abroad for several months is the best way to visit another country, and it will never be easier to do this than it is through EAP. It's true when everyone says that going abroad changes your life, and I would recommend this experience to everyone.

Abroad Location: Global Seminar- Rome, Italy

There is so much to say about my experience abroad that a blurb just can't summarize, but I definitely have to say that this was one of the best experiences of my life. I went on the program Math in Rome, and it has nothing to do with the general requirements for Sixth or any of my major requirements, but I just thought it would be fun to go abroad and learn something completely new. I know the name sounds daunting, but it wasn't just focused on math and more on the history of Rome and how math plays a part in it. Being abroad and getting to see the things we learn about just makes it that much more exciting to learn. One of my favorite parts was being able to travel to other places in Italy such as Florence, Venice, Cinque Terre, etc. I got to see everything from the place where Da Vinci was born, to the world famous Coliseum. Besides being able to travel all over the place within Italy, the food was probably the second best part. Every meal from breakfast to dinner was unbelievably delicious. I could never say no to the food even when I was already full. And of course after every meal there would be a gelato run. Basically, this was a trip of nonstop adventures and nonstop eating while learning at the same time. I will never forget this experience in my life.
