This CAT2 course will examine the idea of the American home, family, and domesticity as these concepts and ideologies developed in and around the television. Not only was television physically integrated into the new postwar domestic space (literally built into the structure of suburban homes) but its programming defined new--white, middle class, and suburban--ideas of the home and asserted raced and gendered roles within that space. We will think of television as an active site (vs the boob tube or “vast wasteland”) reshaping the home, inspiring new technologies, and even familial relations (like the advent of the TV dinner). To this end, we will beging by asking what was and is television? In many ways this is a television history class, but we will also consider contemporary television families and how we watch television now--from appointment viewing in primetime to Netflix binging on our computers. In tracking the evolution of domestic tropes (like the housewife or the maid), the technology itself, and how domestic space is articulated as raced and gendered, we will ask questions about what home and television meant and continue to mean as a function of Americanness.

We will use these explorations to hone our writing and critical thinking skills, perform close readings, and learn how to make and support ethical arguments. We will read a combination of academic and popular press articles and watch a lot of television and hopefully these texts will serve as inspiration and models for your course projects, which might include essays; short writing assignments; and a video essay.
Key Course Goals: Argumentative Writing & Citation

- Think critically about visual and written texts
- Identify and understand arguments, both explicit and implicit
- Understand how different kinds of arguments are constructed, how visual arguments persuade, and why some parts of an argument might not be visible or open to debate
- Develop an ability to read, understand, and critique arguments and assumptions in texts in diverse genres including, when appropriate, multi-media texts
- Establish a controlling idea and support it with relevant and carefully evaluated evidence.
- Identify and respond effectively to plausible counterarguments to one’s own positions.
- Cite texts and arguments fairly and effectively
- Practice appropriate means of documenting their work

Required Texts/Technology:

- Netflix subscription for the duration of the class
- Access to Triton Ed
- Access to/Follow the course website/blog

Attendance Policy:

Attendance is required in both lecture and discussion and TAs will take attendance. You may miss up to three classes total without it affecting your grade. After that, each additional absence deducts ½ of a letter grade from your final course grade. If you miss more than six classes, that will result in an automatic fail for the course.

Turning in Your Work & Late Work Policy:

- Assignments are due in hard copy to your TA at times/dates stated on the syllabus (usually at the beginning of your section). You must submit your assignments directly to your TA. Writing submitted late but before the end of the final exam period will be accepted but marked down by one grade notch for every day it is late. You are required to complete and submit all assignments by the end of the final exam period in order to pass the course.
- You are required to complete and submit all assignments by the end of the final exam period in order to pass the course.
- Turnitin.com: In addition to hard copies, all graded writing must be submitted to Turnitin.com (on TritonEd) to receive credit. Late submissions will be penalized. If an assignment is not time stamped in Turnitin.com by midnight on the date it is due, it will be reduced by one full grade (ie.: an A would be lowered to a B).

Course Grade Breakdown:

Participation: 10%
Assignment 1 (Close Reading 2-3 pages): 25%
Assignment 2 (Close Reading with sources 2-3 pages): 30%
Assignment 3 (Close Reading Clip Curation): 30%
Reflective cover letter: 5%
Schedule of Classes:

- I reserve the right to change/alter this schedule as the course progresses. The lecture topic loosely represents what we will discuss that day.
- All assignments are due in discussion on the day noted on the syllabus.
- Please note that all screenings and readings are required and to be completed, like the reading, before class on the day they are assigned (unless otherwise noted).
